TO THE EDITOR OF THE SUN-Sir: correspondent who condemns as 'In flammatory" and otherwise objection able the Administration's latest note to Germany states that the "beautiful dic-tion" of the message is generally conceded. While differing most radically with this critic as to the substantial nature and purpose of the note, which most of us consider admirable, I am moved to dissent also in some measure from his laudatory remark on the score of rhetoric.

It is true that some parts of the note are very well written, but the composi-tion is far from flawless. For example observe the excessive length of senten and the confusing repetition of the word "it" in the first paragraph:

The note of the Imperial German ernment dated the 8th of July, 1915, has received the careful consideration of the regrets to be obliged to say that [it] the two Governments and indicates law and humanity may be applied in the grave matter in controversy, but proposes, suspension of those principles, which vir tually sets them aside.
